

10. Could the islanders have known the legend of Quetzalcoatl, who was tall, fair, and bearded? If so, how could his legend have contributed to this idea?

Today's Museum of the History of Barcelona includes the royal palace and the subterranean Roman ruins adjacent to the palace. It is believed that the hall in the photograph is where Columbus met with King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella to report the findings of his expedition to the "Indies." (© Creative Commons 3.0)
